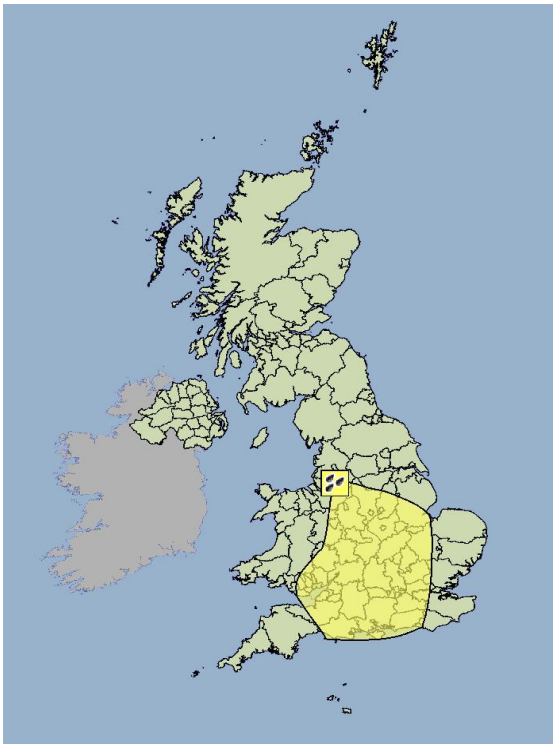
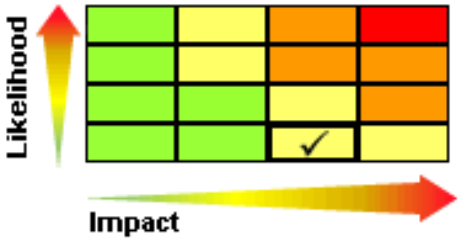
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Thunderstorms may break out in warm, moist air spreading up from the continent. Some locations could see 30-40 mm in an hour and where this falls on urban areas or main roads it could cause disruption to transport and possibly to power. The main risk period is during the afternoon and early evening, though a few thunderstorms are likely to rumble on into the night.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 14:00 on Wed, 14th Sep 2016 until 23:50 on Wed, 14th Sep 2016

Slow-moving, thundery showers may lead to locally torrential downpours across the area, with the risk of frequent lightning.

Please be aware that whilst many places will miss them, there is the risk of flash flooding.
